About the Racial Justice Commission

The New York City Charter provides the structure of City government and key powers of City elected officials and agencies. The Racial Justice Commission is empowered with the authority of a charter revision commission, which is a temporary commission that reviews the entire Charter and puts its amendments before the voters. The Racial Justice Commission is also empowered to recommend other proposed policy and programmatic changes that are not included in its amendment proposals. This work is necessary because systemic racism has been and continues to shape our reality.

The Racial Justice Commission seized the transformative potential of this moment in history and in December 2021, proposed ballot measures incorporating structural changes and significant policy reforms intended to advance racial justice and equity and begin to dismantle structural racism for all New Yorkers. It is now charged with educating voters about those proposals in advance of the November 2022 election.
